

From Coming of Age in Mississippi

By Anne Moody

15.) She goes to a mass rally and Medgar Evers is there.

16.) Her family isn't behind her doing this and it makes her worried that one of them may be murdered.

Questions 4, 6, and 7, p. 617

#4 Anne Moody's metaphor of racism as "an incurable disease in its final stages" is an apt comparison because . . .

#6 I don't know if I would have been able to take the same risks that Anne Moody did because . . .

#7 The fight against racism in America today takes many forms, such as . . . (police brutality, Michael Brown,) In addition, the fight is closer or (not closer) to being won today than it was in Anne Moody's time.
